Excerpt: .To the Pathological Society of London (Medical Press, October 25, 1884): Dr. W. B. Hadden showed specimens from two cases. The first was a woman, aged 33, who had been a heavy drinker. She had a loss of memory for three months, and ten days before her death came for loss of power in legs, and oedema. noisy and delirious. There was no power in her legs, but no tremor, the reflexes were absent, and the muscles of the legs did not respond to the electrical current. The liver was enlarged. At the postmortem, generalized tuberculosis was found, and ulceration of the intestines. The medulla and brain were normal, also the spinal cord. The second patient was aged 42; and her father had died of diabetes. She had suffered from delirium tremens; she could not walk alone. There was no loss of power over...
