There is a large extent of rich mineral country, but the population is small and many of the workings are practically at a standstill, which, if scientifically mined with good machinery, and the stone treated with modern appliances and improved processes, could not fail to give a good return upon the necessary capital. The district is a remote one, timber is scarce, and the carriage of materials, machinery, and even the necessaries of life very expensive. All these causes emphasise the necessity for railway communication. The route vid Croydon to Normantoh is the nearest, although one by way of Herberton to the east coast at Cairns is also strongly advocated. One argument in favour of the latter is the increased facilities it would offer for obtaining timber. The condition of the field has but little changed during 1896, the results being about the same as in 1895. Considerably more than one-fourth of the gold was obtained from the alluvial, Green Hill being the chief contributor, although Percy, Gilberton, Mount Hogan, and Woolgar added their quota. There were 18,476 tons of stone crushed during 1896, giving a yield of 17,033 oz., or 18 dwt. 10 gr. per ton; 2,922 tons of tailings, treated by the cyanide process, returned 2,028 oz., or an average of 13 dwt. 21 gr.; and the alluvial gold won amounted to 7,805 oz.; a total of 26,866 oz., valued at 70,346.
