Now, there is not a man present acquainted with business who does not know that such a society cannot go on without certain reform. It is that reform which I hope the society is not in too irretrievable a position to adopt. At all events, I am satisfied that the discussion produced by my remarks will prove beneficial to the poor man. His lordship then thanked them for the kind attention they bad paid him, not only on that, but on all other occasions, and sat down amidst applause. Mr. A rhmi to the Right Hon. the Earl of Albemarle. My Lord, --Prior to the receipt of your lordship s letter, which reached me only yesterday, my attention had been called by several parties connected with some of the largest and best established friendly societies in the kingdom, to the subject of your lordship s lecture, delivered at Diss, on the 16th ult. These gentlemen have taken great alarm at the promulgation from so influential a source of your lordship s opinions, and at their earnest solicitation I consented to write a leply, with a view to its publication, but have to regret not yet being able to find time for that purpose. In undertaking this duty, the only object I can have must be in common with that of vour lordship, to benefit institutions with the cause of which I have...
