What do I need of a chemist is the question asked by many of our American manufacturers. He needs that chemist far more than he has vision to understand. What has science to say to me What can technical men do for me 11B been too long and is yet too much the cry of the man who operates by rule of thumb. That rule of thumb is yet too prevalent; it is a part of the darkness, a part of the ignorance. . Out of that we are emerging, but we have a lot to learn. We e. could learn scientific application to industry from Germany. We could learn thrift from France. We have taught the world many things, but we ourselves must be learners still. I have not any fear for the industries of America in any contest of the future if we bring to the front, into commanding power, in those industries the men of science. When the mill superintendent and agent listen to the scientific man, and listen attentively, with a welcome and open mind, then American industry has nothing to fear. Our weakness has been that we have listened with closed ears to the voice of science and have not opened our minds to the men who have studied to know. I have been a manufacturing man all my life, and I know whereof I speak from practical experience. I think, however, that the day is...
